第4問 A 次の文章を読んで問い(問21～23)に対し、本文の内容にあうものをそれぞれ下の①～④のうちから一つずつ選べ。

Saliva provides another example, albeit less exotic, of taste modification. Although people do not notice the taste because they have adapted to it, their saliva does have a taste. Since the composition of everyone's saliva varies, the taste of everyone's saliva differs. A person with very high salivary sodium content is less able than someone with low-sodium saliva to taste small amounts of salt. This means that the saltiness detected in a particular food may vary according to the sodium content of a person's saliva.

注 saliva: the liquid that is produced naturally in your mouth.

問21 The paragraph preceding this passage most probably dealt with

26

- ① exotic tastes
- ② the production of saliva
- ③ elements that change tastes
- ④ effects of salt on taste

問22 Why do people NOT notice the taste of their own saliva? 27

- ① Human tongues are not adapted to taste saliva.
- ② It has no taste.
- ③ Salt interferes with the ability to taste saliva.
- ④ They are accustomed to the taste.

問23 According to the passage, the taste of salt can be affected by the amount of 28

- ① sodium in a person's saliva
- ② food eaten at one meal
- ③ saliva in a person's mouth
- ④ other spices in the food

B 次の文章を読んで問い(問24～29)に対し、本文の内容にあうものをそれぞれ下の①～④のうちから一つずつ選べ。

AB909, Economic Analysis and Policy, is a course in microeconomic theory oriented to the study of various problems of public policy. Although the course is required, students who meet certain criteria can be exempted from taking it.

Waiver

by credentials for AB909 is possible only for students with high grade point averages who have already taken advanced courses in economics and applied economic policy. Applicants must submit a transcript copy in addition to a waiver form.

Other students can apply to take the waiver exam, which is a straightforward test of microeconomics emphasizing the ability to solve problems. Students may take this exam only once, at the time they enter the graduate school. Any student who fails the waiver exam should take AB909 immediately.

問24 According to the passage, AB909 is a course on

29

- ① the theory of microeconomics
- ② public economic policy
- ③ Asian economic systems
- ④ various economics studies

問25 According to the passage, a student who obtains a waiver by credentials can

30

- ① receive a new transcript
- ② take a special examination.
- ③ be released from the course requirement.
- ④ take the course at another time

問26 According to the passage, students can apply for a waiver by credentials in AB909 if they have

31

- ① demonstrated academic ability in other subjects
- ② already taken advanced courses in the areas to be covered
- ③ done well in basic economics courses
- ④ completed all other required courses

問27 According to the passage, the waiver exam is a test of 32

- ① advanced microeconomic issues in the private sector
- ② microeconomics and problem-solving skills
- ③ applied economic policy
- ④ historical economic trends

問28 Students may take the waiver exam

33

- ① after they apply to the graduate school
- ② whenever they are ready
- ③ any time after their first semester
- ④ when they enter graduate school

問29 A student who fails the waiver exam should

34

- ① take Economic Analysis and Policy
- ② do further reading and take the exam again
- ③ choose a major other than economics
- ④ take form AB909 to the office at once
